DRUG AND ALCOHOL
ADDICTION TREATMENT

What Is Involved In The Inpatient Rehab Program?

Rehabilitation requires a multi-faceted approach for success because addiction is a complex disease with a number of influencing factors to consider.

Assessment

Following admission at our facility, patients will undergo a psychological and physical assessment to determine their specific needs.

Group Therapy

Group therapy continues to be an effective strategy for people to address emotional issues that are associated with their addiction. Group therapy is also an opportunity for individuals to learn new coping mechanisms from people who have experienced similar situations. Patients are separated into gender-specific groups which helps to support more comfortable therapy sessions.

Individual Therapy Sessions

Drug and alcohol addiction often coexist with psychological issues. Some of these issues may need to be addressed through individual therapy sessions. Depending on the situation, one-on-one sessions will provide complete privacy and discretion that allows an individual to achieve personal growth that may not occur in the a group setting.

Holistic Therapies

Our center works off of the belief that treating the whole person rather than simply focusing on the disease of addiction is important. Holistic therapies are a key ingredient to the healing process. We encourage clients to continue to seek out other forms of support after discharge from LaArk Recovery.
